Mark-Up: H.R. 87 (Rep. Marsha Blackburn), To modify the boundary of the Shiloh National Military Park located in Tennessee and Mississippi, to establish Parker's Crossroads Battlefield as an affiliated area of the National Park System, and for other purposes.
March 15 & 16, 2016; 1324 Longworth HOB

H.R. 87 (Rep. Marsha Blackburn), “Shiloh National Military Park Boundary Adjustment and Parker's Crossroads Battlefield Designation Act”

Bill Summary

H.R. 87, introduced on January 6, 2015 by Congresswoman Marsha Blackburn (R-TN-7), expands the Shiloh National Military Park to include three new battlefields. Additionally, the bill establishes Parker’s Crossroads Battlefield as an affiliated area of the National Park System.

Background

Corinth, Mississippi was a flashpoint in the Western Theatre during the Civil War. Located between the junction of the Memphis and Charleston Railroad and the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, the town served as a critical point for “communications, commerce, and transportation.”¹ Starting in April 1862 with the Battle of Shiloh, Union and Confederate forces battled for control of this strategic town with the Union Army ultimately prevailing and controlling Corinth until 1864. Shiloh National Military Park (NMP) was established in December 1894 and currently houses “over 450 historic plaques, 151 monuments, 217 cannon” as well as unmarked graves, cemeteries, and mass burial trenches commemorating the Battle of Shiloh.² In 2000, the NMP expanded to include the Corinth Unit to preserve more battle sites associated with the Siege of Corinth.

² Ibid., p. 19

H.R. 87 expands Shiloh NMP by approximately 2,126 acres to include the Fallen Timbers, Russell House, and Davis Bridge Battlefields. The Fallen Timbers Battlefield covers a 470 acre area that marked the beginning of the Siege of Corinth after a Union brigade attacked a Confederate field hospital on April 8, 1862, causing the Confederate forces to retreat to Corinth.³ The Russell House Battlefield encompasses 695 acres on the border of Mississippi and Tennessee and served as a strategic high ground for Union forces around the Phillips and Bridge Creeks to drive the Confederate Army deeper into Corinth.⁴ Davis Bridge Battlefield is 961 acres and the location of the battle between Van Dorn's Army of the West and Union forces.

After Van Dorn's defeat, there were no Confederate offensives in Mississippi for the remainder of the war.⁵ NPS determined that each site retains a "fair to high degree of integrity" and either provides extensive opportunities for visitor use and interpretation or the potential for archaeological research.⁶

The bill also designates Parker's Crossroads Battlefield, located in Henderson County, Tennessee, as an affiliated area of the National Park System. As an affiliate of NPS, the area would be privately owned; however, it would be eligible for technical assistance and interpretative services provided by NPS.

Major Provisions of the Bill

- Revises the boundary of Shiloh National Military Park to include approximately 2,126 acres encompassing three new battlefield areas
- Designates Parker's Crossroads Battlefield as an affiliated area of the National Park System

Administration Position

In testimony during a legislative hearing on February 11, 2016, NPS expressed support for the bill and offered the technical amendment explained below.⁷

Anticipated Amendments

During markup, Rep. Bishop will offer an amendment that makes technical corrections to update the map of the proposed boundary expansion and make the language designating Parker's Crossroads as an affiliated site consistent with previous language used to designate affiliated sites of the National Park System.
