Background

August 25, 2016 marks the 100th anniversary of the signing of the National Park Service Organic Act. This Act created NPS, a new federal bureau within the Department of the Interior responsible for promoting and protecting 35 national parks and monuments. The National Park

System has grown significantly since 1916 and now comprises 409 units covering more than 84 million acres in all 50 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, American Samoa, Guam, Saipan, and the Virgin Islands.¹

In preparing the parks for the Centennial, the agency faces a number of challenges, chief among them being the NPS’s $11.5 billion deferred maintenance backlog.² As the NPS gradually took on new responsibilities and Congress voted to add new units to the National Park System, NPS fell behind on necessary projects. These projects include maintaining trails, fixing wastewater systems, and repairing deteriorating roads and bridges.

In addition to deferred maintenance projects, the NPS also faces challenges with fee collection, technological upgrades, management of concessions contracts for visitor services, and decreasing visitation. In 2014, America’s National Parks had a record-setting 292.8 million visits, however when measured on a per capita basis, visitation declined in recent decades.³ The decline in visitation has been particularly high among youth. Recent reports indicate that visits to parks by those 15 and younger fell by 50% over the last decade.⁴

In the face of these significant challenges, the “National Park Service Centennial Act,” sponsored by Chairman Rob Bishop, helps the NPS prepare for its nation-wide celebration in 2016, and it better equips the NPS for the next century of promoting and protecting our parks. Provisions in the bill help the NPS reduce its deferred maintenance backlog by creating new sources of revenue to pay for needed improvements. Other provisions will help the NPS expand its Volunteers in Parks and Public Lands Corps programs as well as make needed changes to the National Park Foundation Board of Directors.

Major Provisions

National Park Centennial Challenge Fund

- Creates a Centennial Challenge Fund to be used to fund signature projects on a 1:1 federal to private match. Last year's omnibus continuing resolution for appropriations included $10 million for the NPS Centennial Challenge program. The appropriated money leveraged $16 million in private donations that funded 106 projects.⁵ The Act builds on this success by providing the fund with revenue from an increase in the price of the senior lifetime parks pass, which is currently only $10.⁶
- The bill increases the senior lifetime pass to $80 to match the price of the annual National Parks and Federal Recreational Lands Pass.

National Park Foundation Endowment

- Establishes a Second Century Endowment at the National Park Foundation that will grow over time through gifts and bequests, as well as from revenue generated by a small new fee on overnight hotel stays within units of the National Park System (camping is not included).

Volunteers-in-Parks Program

- Removes an arbitrary restriction on appropriations that can be used on Volunteers-in-Parks to accommodate the funding needed to support this growing program.

Public Lands Corps

- Raises the age limit for participation in the Public Lands Corps from 25 to 30, and changes the non-competitive hiring status for former Public Land Corps members from 120 days after the member's service is completed to a period of up to two years.

Intellectual Property

- Permits the Secretary of the Interior to enter into agreements for the creation of reproductions of National Park Service museum objects. These agreements can include fees or royalties, which can be retained and used by the park or repository where the museum object is held.

National Park Foundation

- Makes the Secretary of the Interior and the NPS Director ex-officio members of the National Park Foundation Board, ensuring leadership continuity.
